

Space, Capital and Social History in South Asia

International Workshop
Centre for Modern Indian Studies
Göttingen, 24 – 27 June 2010

Ravi Ahuja opens up the debate on space, capital & social history in South Asia

Sharad Chari on the spacial dialectics of industrialisation and segregation

The participants are following the presentations on the first day.

Dilip Subramanian replies to comments from the audience.

Anish Vanaik talks on property in Colonial Delhi.

Control of space and space of control in Lahore: Anushay Malik

Anushay Malik, Sharad Chari (Chair), Prabhat Kumar and Anish Vanaik dicussing their papers

Nikhil Rao on Suburban Space in Bombay

Markus Daechsel talks on „governmentalities“

Dinner at the Deutsche Theater

Enjoying the mild summer evening.

Day two: Prabhu Mohapatra suggests to change the table order.

Prabhu Mohapatra and Henrike Donner are getting ready for the presentations.

P. Radhika illustrates her presentation with pictures from her fieldwork.

The presentations are met with many questions and comments.

Ian Kerr with his key-note speech on railroad driven transformations in India.

Day 3: Rana Behal suggested to start the day with a short propaganda film on tea production from the 1910s.

Nitin Varma explains his thoughts on tea plantations and labour.

Stefan Tetzlaff and Arupjyoti Saikia discuss questions of petroleum production and consumption in India

Marcel van der Linden and Marcelo Badaró Matto present their final remarks.

27 June: Excursion on “Forced labour during NS regime” to Duderstadt. The group meets in front of the Polte Werke, an arms factory where forced labour has been used excessively.