Seminar on Sustainable Development and sustainability reporting

Sustainable development is one of the key principles of environmental, economic and social policies at international, European and national levels. While introduced already some time ago, the meaning and the implications of the principle are still in need for clarification. Beyond exploring the evolution, concept and legal relevance of the principle in general terms the seminar will address the role, that sustainable development plays in legislative and administrative assessments and newer forms of reporting of enterprises and public institutions.

The seminar will address the following issues:

- History and concept of sustainable development
- The UN sustainable development goals
- Sustainable development in German, European and international law
- Sustainability and legislative and administrative impact assessments
- Sustainability and corporate social responsibility (CSR)
- European Union and German legislation on corporate social responsibility
- CSR reporting
