Göttingen Centre for Gender Studies (GCG)

The GCG is an interdisciplinary institution within the Social Sciences and Philosophy departments at the University of Göttingen. Its main goal is to promote research activities in the field of Gender Studies at the Göttingen Campus, with special attention given to the support of young academics.

In addition, the Centre supports national and international networking activities in Gender Studies.

Our homepage includes a regularly updated research database of our members with their research foci and research projects.

Research Foci

Reproduction and Practices of Establishing Kinship

This research topic is especially interesting from a transdisciplinary perspective, as researchers in Literature, Law, Sociology, Cultural Anthropology, History, and Bioethics are collaborating on this topic in Göttingen. Additionally, this topic provides links to themes such as Globalisation of Health Research, Development Economics, Global Health, and Cross-Border-Reproduction.

Gender and Migration

Within the Lower Saxony network Gender and Migration@Niedersachsen and local university networking projects concerned with migration, GCG's members have continuously developed this research field.

Gender and the Body

Gender, as a category of difference generated by processual and social practices, constitutes a theoretical point of reference and a major point for investigating body concepts and practices in this cross-disciplinary research project.

Religion and Gender

In connection with the university's initiative for excellence in research, religion has become an important field of research in Göttingen. In the future, it is planned to implement gender-sensitive issues in an innovative manner in this research area.

Gender and Development Economics

This topic area is being researched at the Faculty of Economic Sciences in Göttingen and primarily utilises quantitative methods. This research, in the long term, offers important starting points for disciplines primarily employing theoretical and conceptual methods or qualitative methods. In the context of the Göttingen International Health Networks' research initiatives, these connections will be strengthened in the future.
