Examination and Study Regulations for the Consecutive Master's Degree Programme "English: Language, Literatures and Cultures" of Georg-August-Universität Göttingen

§ 1 Scope of Regulations

- (1) The provisions of the "General Examination Regulations for Bachelor's and Master's Degree Programmes and Other Courses at the University of Göttingen" (APO) and the "General Examination Regulations for Master's Degree Programmes at the Faculty of Humanities" in the currently valid versions apply to the Master's degree programme in "English: Language, Literatures and Cultures".
- (2) This regulation governs the further provisions for completion of the Master's degree programme in "English: Language, Literatures and Cultures".

§ 2 Aims of the Course of Studies; Possible Areas of Activity/Career Options

- (1) The degree programme aiming at a Master of Arts (M.A.) in "English: Language, Literatures and Cultures" prepares for a range of jobs concerned with English-language geographical regions, for jobs that cover academically grounded economic, political and social areas, for jobs in language-oriented IT areas and for research-based jobs in academic, publishing, diplomatic or journalistic contexts.
- (2) ¹The course of studies aims at broadening and deepening the subject-specific range of skills and knowledge that students have acquired in a previous related BA programme and to combine these with substantiated theoretical and methodological approaches. ²With respect to independent academic activities students are enabled to verify complex theories by using appropriate methods and approaches to review, prove and mediate/impart them, also by using skills and competencies from other subject-specific areas of knowledge.

(3) A successfully completed Master programme is the foundation for being admitted to a subsequent PhD programme.

(4) ¹The MA degree programme on "English: Language, Literatures and Cultures" does not only aim at deepening subject-specific competencies but also at the involvement in civil society and the development of the students' personalities. ²In particular the following competencies are encouraged: multilingualism, intercultural competence and social competence.

³Multilingualism: The programme's linguistic core areas sensitise students to the special features in using language on different social levels as well as in different historical contexts; they not only get an insight into the manipulative function of language, but also learn how previous generations have dealt with it.

⁴Intercultural competence: The core areas of literary and cultural studies include texts from various English-speaking cultures which reflect both national and global contexts; students not only learn to understand and comprehend these texts, but also to assess them in their respective peculiarities and to compare them critically with their own background.

⁵Social competence: Students acquire social skills through active participation in the self-administration of the seminar and in the work for other students, for example in the independently managed "helpline" and timetable advice groups as well as through helping students wishing to change their study location or who have learning difficulties.

§ 3 Recommended Skills at the Start of Studies

(1) ¹For a good and successful course of studies, a good knowledge of thinking and working methods of the humanities as well as some knowledge of Latin is recommended. ²Applicants whose knowledge is poor are advised to take appropriate further training before starting their studies.

(2) ¹ In the field of linguistics (subfield modern English language theories), a well-founded prior knowledge of linguistics is required to attend the MA modules. ²Students without this knowledge are advised to complete module M.EP.020 Master-Basismodul Linguistik (A) / English Linguistics (A).

(3) ¹In the field of linguistics (subfield history of English), a well-founded prior knowledge of historical linguistics is required to attend the MA modules. ²Students without this knowledge are advised to complete module M.EP.02c Mediävistik - Basismodul 2/Medieval English Studies 2 (6 C).

§ 4 Structure of the Course of Studies; Programme Content

(1) The course of studies starts in the winter or summer semester.

(2) ¹The degree programme can be studied part-time. ²This does not apply for every possible combination of "English: Language, Literatures and Cultures" (worth 42 credits) with a subject-external module package worth 36 or 18 credits but only in so far as the module packages can be studied part-time, or if the combination is eligible for part-time studying. ³Audit and assessment are by application to the Dean of Students.

(3) ¹The course of studies comprises 120 credits (ECTS credits; in short: C), which are distributed as follows:

- a. for the specialist course of studies 78 C,
 - aa. English: Language, Literatures and Cultures worth 78 C or
 - bb. English: Language, Literatures and Cultures worth 42 C combined with an eligible module package in a different subject amounting to 36 C, or with two eligible module packages in a different subject amounting to 18 C each;
- b. towards the area of professionalisation (key competencies) 12 C,
- c. towards the master thesis 30 C.

²When planning the overall degree programme with "English: Language, Literatures and Cultures" worth 42 C students should be aware that module packages may be designed for taking up the course of studies in the winter semester; in this case students should apply to their student counsellors.

(4) If students choose the module package "North American Studies" worth 36 C, they may not complete modules M.EP.01b, M.EP.04b and M.EP.06b as part of their degree programme in "English: Language, Literatures and Cultures".

(5) ¹The module overview (appendix I) specifies the compulsory modules, optional required modules and optional modules. ²For recommendation on the appropriate structure of the course of studies, please refer to the sample curriculums enclosed in appendix II. ³The list of modules is published separately. It forms part of this regulation insofar as the modules are listed in the module overview (appendix I).

(6) ¹Taking Master courses in "English: Language, Literatures and Cultures" enables students to deepen their knowledge in literary and cultural studies as well as in linguistics. Students can, however, develop a specialization by taking modules from just one of the areas of literary and cultural studies or linguistics. ²By choosing the corresponding completion module they can also attain a research-oriented specialization in one of the sub-areas. ³Writing a master's thesis is based on attending the corresponding completion module.

(7) ¹The degree programme offers students a specialization in one of the following areas: "Studies in English Literature and Culture: Focus on Literary and Cultural Management"; "Anglophone Literature and Culture"; "Literary and Cultural Studies"; and "Language in Focus:

Linguistics and Medieval English Studies". ²Details are contained in the module overview (appendix I).

(8) In the area of key skills, special modules are available for students of "English: Language, Literatures and Cultures" that focus on research skills, knowledge transfer, planning skills and intercultural skills (see corresponding module descriptions).

(9) ¹The module overview list also outlines the module packages offered as part of the MA degree programme in "English: Language, Literatures and Cultures" which students can complete within an unrelated MA degree, worth 36 C or 18 C respectively. ²The module packages can be studied part-time. ³Modules on offer for students of the degree programme in "English: Language, Literatures and Cultures" can also be completed by students enrolled in any of the module packages offered by the degree programme.

§ 5 Subject-Specific Types of Courses and Exams

(1) In addition to the types of exam allowed according to the provisions of APO, modules on offer for the degree programme "English: Language, Literatures and Cultures" or the corresponding module packages can end with a poster presentation, a planning and implementation sketch, a research report, reading logs, a take home essay, an essay, an excursion report, a portfolio or an internship report.

(2) ¹A poster presentation provides central research results on a specific topic in a visual format in DIN A2 or DIN A1. ²Poster presentations do not replace a specialist lecture, but rather enable interested parties to quickly and precisely obtain information on a topic as part of a conference or a subject-specific exhibition. ³Use of text, graphics and visualizations is a central component of a poster presentation.

(3) ¹A planning and implementation sketch is used to record preliminary considerations, in particular referencing goals and procedures for a project or a seminar session, in which possible further questions are also taken into account, and to record the planned implementation in a table. ²A central component of a planning and implementation sketch is reflecting the method chosen. ³With a planning and implementation sketch, students show that they have the necessary theoretical didactic and specialist knowledge and methods to prepare and present a topic in a meaningful way for a group and to reflect critically on the actual implementation. ⁴The number of words for a planning and implementation sketch for a seminar session is fixed at max. 2000 words; for a project it is fixed at max. 3500 words.

(4) A research report contains an independently compiled overview of the state of research on a selected topic with an evaluation of key research contributions and approaches.

(5) ¹Reading Logs are used to show students' independent critical reflection on central content and elements as well as on the structure and argumentation structure of primary and secondary literature. ²They are submitted at regular intervals during the semester and contain around 750 words each.

(6) ¹In a Take Home Exam, students discuss several specific questions (possibly in several parts) on a subject complex that is covered within a course; it is written independently and submitted to the instructor for review and correction within an agreed time frame. ²A Take Home Exam may allow the use of secondary sources, depending on the type of question and context discussed.

(7) ¹An essay is used for independent critical reflection on central subjects as well as on the structure and argumentation structure of the primary and secondary literature. ²Students choose the topic independently but in consultation with the instructor. ³An essay is around 8 pages long.

(8) ¹An excursion report includes the key data of the excursion (places visited, sights, museums, institutions, information on exchanges with foreign students and scientists). ²It also lists and evaluates the main areas of activity which were focused on in the historical archive, with a special focus on the exact description and recording of medieval manuscripts as relevant for the respective archive and its curatorial research. ³Finally, the preparation of illustrative material for the Department's homepage is part of the excursion report, in which, above all, the practical aspects of the excursion module are to be presented in a generally understandable manner; this serves both to secure the results and to reflect on the applicability for a non-(exclusively) academic audience.

(9) ¹A portfolio ("folder of documents") aims at documenting the students' course of studies while reflecting and commenting on it. ²In it several short assignments are collected (e.g. minutes of seminar sessions, reflections on homework, summaries of reading materials; also multimedia tasks).

(10) An internship report contains a description of the respective institution and the framework conditions of the internship as well as a reflection of the students' learning processes and challenges in max. 4000 words.

(11) ¹In addition to in-presence courses modules can also contain independent study parts. ²They are used for guided self-study: Students broaden and deepen their subject-specific knowledge independently but under guidance and with feedback from the lecturers. ³In the course of this, important research techniques are practiced, e.g. with catalogues, databases and text corpora. ⁴Instructions and feedback take place in at least three meetings spread over the semester.

§ 6 Admission to Master Thesis

To be admitted to their Master thesis, students must have completed obligatory modules, electives and obligatory elective modules worth at least 70 C; of these at least 30 C must be from subject-specific modules from the degree programme.

§ 7 Repetition of Exams to Improve Grades

It is not permitted to repeat examinations which have been passed, for the purpose of improving grades; the provision contained in § 16 a section 3 sentence 2 APO remains unaffected.

§ 8 Student Counselling; Obligatory Student Counselling

(1) The specialised study advisory service is offered by the lecturers involved in the degree programme, while advice on examination matters is provided by the Examination Office of the Faculty of Humanities.

(2) The Central Student Advisory Office of the university is in charge of general study advice, especially regarding inter-faculty questions.

(3) In addition, students should take advantage of the study advisory service especially in the following cases:

- after failing an examination twice,
- in the event of any deviations from the standard course length,
- if changing the degree programme or university,
- before a planned course of studies abroad,
- at the end of the second semester or at the beginning of the third semester of studies,
- when choosing additional modules for students with a low level of German language skills.

(4) ¹Students wishing to complete an advanced-level Master module (M.EP.09a-c) must apply for an obligatory counselling before the start of the respective course. ²The aim of the counselling meeting is to clarify which individual qualifications they have, which research project they aim to work on and what the state of affairs of work on the project is.

§ 9 Special Options for Grades

Students can request to disregard the grade of one module worth at most 12 C which is part of the subject-specific core curriculum in the degree programme. This grade will be converted into a pass mark. At the latest the application must be entered when the degree certificate is issued; alternatively application can be made when students wish to change universities. The application can only be made once and cannot be taken back once the conversion has been entered into the examination system.

§ 10 Entry into Force; Interim Regulations

(1) This regulation shall enter into force following its announcement in the official announcements I of the University of Göttingen as of 01.10.2021.

(2) At the same time the regulation for the consecutive MA degree programme "English Philology" in the version published on 16 November 2010 (official announcements no. 40/2010

pp. 3967 ff.) in its last revision by the Presidency dated 26 February 2019 (official announcements I no. 14/2019 pp. 171 ff) ceases to be in force.

(3) ¹Students who began their studies before the change to the present examination and study regulations came into effect and who were continuously enrolled in this degree programme, or who were registered for one of the module packages of "English Philology" will be examined in accordance with the examination and study regulations in the version applicable before the change came into effect. ²In the case of examinations that are still to be taken, this does not apply to the module overview and module descriptions, unless the protection of student trust requires a different decision by the examination committee.

³A different decision is possible in particular in cases in which an examination can be repeated or a compulsory or required elective module has been significantly changed or deleted from the list of modules. ⁴The examination committee can pass general regulations in these cases.

⁵Examinations in accordance with the study regulation version that was valid before a change to these examination and study regulations came into effect will be held for the last time in the fourth semester following the change in the regulations. ⁶Upon request, students belonging to the group described in sentence 1 above will be examined in accordance with the provisions of the amended regulations.
